The English are 'Forgotten'

It's No Accident the English are 'Forgotten'!

White working-class kids have been let down by schools for decades, and woke phrases such as "white privilege" are making it worse.

You'll have seen the shocking – but not surprising – facts in the news:

Just 53 per cent of white children on free school meals hit their expected targets when they start school. This is one of the lowest figures for any ethnic group.

They underperform compared to almost every other ethnic group throughout their school years.

Just 16 per cent of these kids end up in higher education, the lowest of any settled ethnic group.

The media gives lots of 'reasons' for this: poverty, low expectations and the way the government pours our tax money into 'diverse' areas, at the expense of the rest of the country.

But they won't mention the biggest reason: The very label 'white' is deliberately misleading. When they say 'white', they really mean ENGLISH.

By using 'white', they deliberately deny our children and community the protected status of a genuine ethnic group. And they can portray anyone speaking out against the way they have failed us as 'racist'.

Denying the English are an ethnic and cultural group leaves our community wide open to abuse and neglect. They make us invisible, because it helps them cover up their failures, from educational under-achievement to the grooming scandal.

The English Democrats have achieved some famous victories in the long fight to put this right, but there is much more to do. That's why I'm asking you to JOIN TODAY and help us secure first recognition, and then justice, for the English people!
