

Poetry Corner

Lockdown Sceptics has new poem today, by the author and Lockdown Sceptics reader who calls herself Liberty Walker. This one inspired by a headline in the Telegraph about child's play not being a form of exercise

Let Me Play

I'm just a child please let me play
I want to go outside today,
To run around and sing and shout,
Why won't Boris let me out?

I used to play out in the street,
My friends and I we used to meet,
But now I sit and watch the screen,
My childhood is a tortured dream,

My stolen childhood must be restored,
These politicians should be ignored,
I need to play and socialise,
Not be kept indoors by fear and lies.

Roger Wright-Morris.
<http://www.briefingsforfreedom.co.uk/>